NATURE'S WORSHIP.

The harp at Nature's advent strong
Has never ceased to play;
The song the stars of morning sung
Has never died away.
And prayer is made, and praise is given,
By all things near and far;
The ocean loquacious up to heaven
And mirrors every star.
Its waves are kneeling on the strand,
As kneels the human knee;
Their white locks bowing to the sand,
The priesthood of the sea.
They pour their glittering treasures forth,
Their gifts of pearls they bring;
And all the listening hills of earth
Take up the song they sing.
The green earth sends her incense up
From many a mountain shrine;
From fabled leaf and dewy cup,
She pours her sacred wine.
The mists among the morning hills
Rise white as wings of prayer;
The altar curtains of the hills
Are sunset's purple air.
The winds with hymns of praise are loud,
Or low with sounds of pain;
The thunder organ of the clouds,
The dropping tears of rain.
With drooping head and branches crossed,
The twilight forest grieves,
Or speaks with tongues of Pentecost,
From all its sunlit leaves.
The blue sky is the temple arch,
Its transept earth and air;
The music of its story march
The chorus of a prayer.
So Nature keeps the reverent frame
With which her years begin;
With all her signs and voices shame
The prayerless heart of man.

VANDERBILT'S STAIR.—The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal says: Every little while the newspapers contain an account of Vanderbilt's beginning. His own statement on his first real success is this: He was a young man on Staten Island. He was master of a rowing. He was athletic, strong and daring. One night a stranger came to the landing and wanted to cross to Gowanus. The night was dark and stormy—the wind blew a gale. Not a boatman could be found who would leave. The landlord said: "There is nobody who can row you over but Corn Vanderbilt," for he was so called. "It was very doubtful," he said, "whether he would do it." Vanderbilt was found, and in answer to the request, replied: "It's pretty rough, but if you'll give me ten dollars, lay down in my boat and not stir, and do just what I bid you, I'll try it." The stranger assented. He rowed the man over and back in safety. As soon as he had landed at Staten Island the stranger said: "Young man, how would you like to run an opposition steamboat?" "Nothing would suit me better," was the reply. "Have you pluck enough to obey orders?" said the stranger. "I have," was the response. "Suppose I was to tell you to run into a steamboat, what would you do?" "Run into her, by—"

The bargain was sealed amid the storm that night, on the island, and Vanderbilt entered upon his well known career as a steamboat man.

STATISTICS OF LIFE.—The yearly mortality of the globe is 33,333,333 persons. This is at the rate of 91,554 per day, 3,730 per hour, 62 per minute. Each pulsation of the heart makes the decease of some human creature. The average of human life is 33 years. One-fourth of the population die at or before the age of seven years. One-half at or before seventeen years. Among 10,000 persons, one arrives at the age of 100 years, one in 500 attains the age of 90, and one in 100 lives to the age of 60. In 1,000 persons, 95 marry, and more marriages occur in June and December than in any other month of the year. One-eighth of the whole population is military. Professors exercise a great influence on longevity. In 1,000 individuals who arrive at the age of seventy years, forty-three are clergymen, orators, or public speakers, forty are agriculturists, thirty-seven are workmen, thirty-two are soldiers or military employees, twenty-nine advocates or engineers, twenty-seven professors, and twenty-four doctors.

A LAWYER'S TOAST.—Belonging as he said to the profession which had the reputation of being fond of fees, he offered:

Fee simple, and simple fee,
And all the fees in tail,
Are nothing when compared to thee,
The best of fees—FEMALE.

The cost of leeches sold in Europe exceeds $10,000,000 per annum. The finest are said to come from Murray river, Australia.

There are 2,000 post-mistresses in the United States—and more mistresses who are not so well posted.

QUEER MARRIAGES.

The "most married" woman of which there is any record, was undoubtedly the Harlem woman spoken of by Evelyn in his diary, whose propensity for marrying had finally to be checked by law. She married her twenty-fifth husband, and being now a widow was prohibited to marry in the future.

Many years ago, a man in Harts-ville, New York, became attached to a young and beautiful damsel, who died before her intended marriage could be consummated. He then married the mother of the deceased, who was some twenty years his senior, but with whom he lived happily until she was eighty and he sixty years of age. As the wife had by this time become quite decrepit, they adopted a maid of some thirty summers, who had lived with them a year and a half when the old lady died. Before the time appointed for the funeral, the man himself was then sick, on which account the funeral services were postponed four weeks. But in less than two weeks he sent for a Justice of the Peace and was married to the maid he had adopted. The next day the couple applied to the town for support, and a week later the man himself died, his funeral being attended before that of his first wife, and the woman he had so recently married being the only mourner. Human folly is "vast and ilimitable."

When Socrates was asked whether it were better for a man to get married or live single, he replied: "Let him do either and he will repent it." With due respect to Socrates, we must object to the above. We once knew a fortune-hunting young man who married a maiden lady on the windy side of fifty. She was worth about $100,000 and died in less than a month after the celebration of the nuptial ceremonies. He inherited her property, and he never repented his marriage.

Among the ancient Germans it was death for any woman to marry before she was twenty years old. By the laws of Lycurgus the most special attention was paid to the physical education, and no delicate or sick women were allowed to marry.

In the Royal Library of Paris is a written contract, drawn up in 1297, between two persons of noble birth in Armagnac. The document bound husband and wife to faithful wedlock for seven years. It stipulated that the parties should have the right to renew the tie at that time if mutually agreed, but if not, the children should be equally divided; if the number should chance not to be even, they were to draw lots for the odd one.

In Borneo, marriages which generally succeed a lengthened routine of enigmatical courtship peculiar to these people, are celebrated with great pomp and considerable originality. The bride and bridegroom are conducted from the opposite ends of the village to the spot where the ceremony is performed. They are seated on two bars of iron, symbolic of the vigorous and lasting blessings in store for them. A cigar and a betel leaf, carefully prepared with areca nut, are put into the hands of each. One of the officiating priests advances, waves two fowls over the heads of the betrothed and in a long address to the Supreme Being, and a short one to the couple, calls down eternal blessings on them, implores that peace and happiness attend the union, and gives some temporal advice, sometimes of a character more medical than salutary. The spiritual part being thus concluded the material succeeds. The heads of the affirmed are knocked together four times; then the bridegroom puts his betel leaf and cigar into the mouth of the bride, and thus they are an acknowledged couple, with the sanction of their religion. At a later period on the nuptial evening, fowls are killed, the blood caught in two cups, and from its color the priest foretells the happiness or misery of the married couple. The ceremony is closed by a feast, much dancing and noisy music.
